Built to Last: The Trip Hopper Story

After a brutal winter in 1975, Charley Taylor promised his wife, Liz, she would never be knocked down trying to feed cattle on their ranch again.

So, he built the Trip Hopper Range Feeder to take the headache out of the chore. With help from their sons, Jim and Pat, the family started T&S Manufacturing and sold Trip Hoppers to ranchers who wanted a better way to feed their cattle.

T&S Feeders take the labor and guesswork out of feeding your herd. Since Charley's first model, we've refined the design to make it even smoother and more efficient. A motorized conveyor belt delivers the precise ration you set (per pound or per head), while a flow gauge ensures accuracy. With multiple sizes available, you can feed on the ground, in troughs, or in a continuous trail or interval piles.

Installation is simple, and if you can drive a truck, you can run a Trip Hopper without stepping into the weather or lifting a single feed sack. As Jim said, "All you gotta do is buy it, put it on your truck, feed, and enjoy!" Every model promotes more consistent consumption, which means cows breed back quicker, calves wean heavier, and cattle perform better in winter. Trip Hoppers are a convenient and versatile solution for feeding all your livestock. Plus, with the Paddleveyor attachment, you can easily fill your deer and game feeders.

T&S Manufacturing and Trip Hopper Range Feeders have come a long way since Charley built the first one, but our mission hasn't changed: helping ranchers across the country feed their herds with less work, less time, and more savings.

The Red and Blue Standard Texas-Made. Rancher-Approved.

Trip Hopper cattle feeders, trusted by ranchers for decades, are now built stronger than ever with Priefert's industry-leading steel. This partnership between two Texas-based, family-owned companies brings together Trip Hopper's proven feeding solutions and Priefert's reputation for unmatched durability.

Both brands share deep roots in agriculture and a commitment to quality that stands the test of time. By combining innovative design with the toughest materials, these feeders are built to deliver reliable performance season after season, no matter the conditions.

From the heart of Texas to ranches nationwide, Trip Hopper and Priefert are proud to offer equipment that works as hard as you do.
